BIG SISTER ASSOCIATION OF GREATER BOSTON

Inspire a Girl. Transform Our Community.

How does a Big Sister inspire a girl? She gives her the care, support, and attention she needs to recognize her own strengths. She lets her know she matters. When a girl knows that she matters, she develops the confidence to learn new skills and make healthy decisions.

As a result, there's a ripple effect within her family and her peer group. Multiply that effect by the thousands of girls Big Sister serves each year and it can transform entire communities. That is why an investment in girls is an investment in our community. By giving to Big Sister, you make this possible. Yet, we know, this has not been an easy time to give.

We have all been impacted by the global economic downturn this past year. At Big Sister, we witness its effects when our volunteers are laid off from work; when our Little Sisters no longer have phone service; when the need for our programs increases, and the list of girls waiting to be matched with a Big Sister grows beyond our capacity. With tenacity of spirit, determination and resolve, our staff worked throughout the year to put friendship in the path of risk for Greater Boston's girls, giving them the opportunity to realize their full potential. Despite an unpaid furlough and a hiring and wage freeze, our staff never wavered from their commitment to girls. Neither did you.

“When a girl knows that she matters, she develops the confidence to learn new skills and make healthy decisions.”

You helped us expand our community by volunteering your time as a Big Sister; supporting our events, partnering with us in creative ways, riding your bike as part of Team Big Sister; or joining our Young Professional Board and our Diversity Council. You opened doors for us, and ultimately created more opportunities for girls throughout Greater Boston.

Together, we are creating ripples of positive change in the community. Thank you for being part of that community and for never giving up on the girls when they need it most.

Warm regards,

Deborah Re
Chief Executive Officer

Collateral Damage

Suffolk County Sheriff, Andrea Cabral, is the first woman in Massachusetts to hold the position. Here she discusses the role of girls in the justice system, and how mentoring can prevent them from entering it.

What trends are you seeing in relation to adolescent girls and the justice system?

The numbers of adolescent girls who become involved in the criminal justice system is growing fairly rapidly. Frequently, but not always, the adolescent girl and her parent or caretaker has had some prior involvement with the Department of Social Services through a Care and Protection action, a Child in Need of Services Petition, or investigation of an allegation of abuse. Often, there are truancy and runaway issues as well.

We are also seeing increased numbers of violent crimes involving physical assaults, use of weapons, and gang-related criminal activity.

What current threats do you see to girls in our City achieving their full potential?

The threats I'm seeing are violence and sexual assault, truancy, dropping out of school, and teen pregnancy. There not enough resources devoted to programs specifically designed for young girls

Big in Boston Gets Bigger!

November 12 was a very big night, full of little moments that reminded us all why inspiring a girl has the power to transform our community. Despite a year of economic uncertainty, Big Sister supporters, including co-chairs Jack Connors, Jr. and Melissa M. MacDonnell, gathered at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum for the biggest Big in Boston yet. The event raised more than $600,000 to benefit our mentoring programs for girls.

Big in Boston celebrated every aspect of our work. In a special pre-event ceremony, we recognized seven outstanding women for their commitment to the girls we serve. You can read more about the winners on the opposite page.

During the main event, guests were treated to an array of voices representing the power of mentoring. The program opened with a video featuring the hopes of girls waiting for a Big Sister; as well as prominent Bostonians—such as Liz Walker, Paul Guzzi, and Lydia Shire—reading letters written by current Little Sisters. Former Little Sister Colleen White then took the stage, telling her story of growing up in South Boston: “Things at home were almost always chaotic...it never felt like a real family because I was always on my own,” Colleen said. At 11 years old, Colleen was matched with Big Sister Kristen Herlihy. She was wary of this new woman in her life, who she described as “definitely not from Southie.” But in time Kristen became Colleen’s best friend, confidant, and biggest supporter; and she continues to fill that role to this day (read more about them on page 5).

The evening continued with a delicious sit-down dinner and live music by 17 year old jazz sensation, Grace Kelly. Grace is already in her second year at Berklee College of Music, has recorded five CDs, and has performed around the world with some of the top performers in jazz. In between songs, Grace gave a special message of hope and determination to the Little Sisters gathered in the room. Grace is a shining example of where you can go when someone like a mentor believes in you—and allows you to believe in yourself. She advised the Little Sisters to follow their own dreams, no matter what they may be.

Finally, we honored the Women’s Network of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce with the first-ever Believe In Girls Award (opposite page). Katy O’Neil, the Chamber’s Executive Vice President of Member Services, accepted the award from Little Sister Alina and her Big Sister Kirsten Doyle. Kirsten became a Big Sister after hearing about us at a Women’s Network Breakfast in 2008. On October 30, Kirsten celebrated her one year anniversary with her Little Sister.

We could not have hosted such a successful event without the commitment of our co-chairs Jack Connors, Jr. and Melissa M. MacDonnell, the Big in Boston Host Committee, and our dedicated Board of Directors. We would like to extend a big thank you to our Big in Boston sponsors for their role in helping us surpass our goal:

Meet Our Big Sisters of the Year

Big Sister wishes to congratulate the seven remarkable women who were honored on November 12, 2009, as our Big Sisters and Community Partner of the Year. Each woman has gone above and beyond in her commitment to girls and mentoring.

COMMUNITY-BASED MENTORING

Joy Falk

Joy, who lives in Brighton and works at the Harvard School of Public Health, has been matched with her Little Sister Roseanne, 15, of Allston, since October 2005. Roseanne said she likes her Big Sister because "She's smart, funny, easy to get along with, and always has good ideas for what to do...not to mention she understands that there is no such thing as too much frosting." Their match is supported by Big Sister social worker Jessica Mendenhall.

Susan Magocsi

Susan, who lives in Milton and works at the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, has been matched with her Little Sister Tiarra, 16, of Stoughton, since October 2002. "Since Tiarra has been matched with Susan, her self-esteem has improved, her academic abilities have improved and she has a better understanding about life and people," said Tiarra's mother. Their match is supported by Big Sister social worker Emily Goldstein.

Shannon Robinson

Shannon, who lives in Dorchester and works at Hemenway & Barnes, has been matched with her Little Sister Miranda, 14, of Mattapan, since November 2002. "I have seen Miranda grow up to be a fine teenager with the help of Shannon," said Miranda's grandmother. Their match is supported by Big Sister social worker Jessica Mendenhall.

SCHOOL-BASED MENTORING

Kathleen Hewitt

Kathleen, who lives in Scituate, was matched with Kari, 11, at the Parker Elementary School in Quincy in April 2007. When Kari made the transition to Quincy's Atlantic Middle School this year, she and Kathleen continued to meet weekly during Kari's lunch time. "She always listens to me when I have problems and makes me laugh a lot," said Kari. Their match is supported by Big Sister social worker Meaghan Quinlan.

Kelly Morgan

Kelly, who lives in Boston and works at Seaward Management, was matched with Joyce, 12, at the Josiah Quincy Elementary School in March 2006. Joyce is now in seventh grade at the Josiah Quincy Upper School and continues to meet with Kelly weekly. "Kelly always comes up with activities to support Joyce's needs, from more structured projects at when they first started meeting, to more conversation-based interactions now that they have built a comfortable friendship," said Ashley Jackson, the Big Sister social worker who supports the match.

GROUP MENTORING

Rose Seyfried

Rose, a student at Berklee College of Music, is currently in her second year as a Group Mentoring Big Sister. In 2008, Rose volunteered in the group held at the Central Middle School in Quincy. This year, Rose is a Big Sister at the Renaissance Charter School in Boston. "When I was 13 I didn't have someone in this kind of role," says Rose. "It's an amazing experience to be that person for a girl now."

COMMUNITY PARTNER OF THE YEAR

Linda Clarke,
Vice Principal at the
William Blackstone
Elementary School
South End, Boston

Linda has supported and fostered the growth of Big Sister's School-Based Mentoring program at the Blackstone since 2002. She serves as a liaison between the school and our social workers who make and support the Big and Little Sister matches. She considers the Big Sister program to be an important part of the student support services available at the Blackstone, and takes time to refer girls to the program in addition to her other responsibilities as vice principal. Additionally, Linda secured a designated classroom space for Big and Little Sisters to meet in during their weekly visits, which allows for quality one-on-one time together.

Women's Network Honored

The Believe In Girls award honors those who support Big Sister's mission to help girls reach their full potential. On November 12, Big Sister Association presented the award to the Women's Network of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce. We chose the Women's Network because they promote the importance of mentoring at their monthly leadership breakfasts. Since they chose us as their partner in 2007, they have encouraged businesswomen to get involved with Big Sister through board participation, by becoming volunteers, and by contributing financially. "Big Sister develops and mentors girls. The Women's Network develops and mentors women. The two organizations are not only partners; they share a mission and a soul," said Paul Guzzi, president and chief executive officer of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce.

As a result of this partnership, we have matched Big Sister Kirsten Doyle with Little Sister Alina, elected Maria Fernandes to serve on our Young Professional Board, benefited from increased financial support and exposure to the robust network of Boston businesswomen, and extended the Big Sister community to include countless new members.

The Women's Network of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce connects women of all career levels, strengthens their professional networks, and engages them in the Greater Boston business community. The Women's Network has achieved this vision through offering prominent speaker programs, unique receptions and roundtables, and annual awards ceremonies that foster development, spotlight women leaders, and promote the positive impact women have made on the Greater Boston region.

"This is our chance to pay it forward. The women involved in the Women's Network have all benefited from mentors in some way. There are many girls out there who might not. This partnership has created that opportunity," said Linda Conny, chair of the Women's Network and vice president, strategic alliance, at EMC Corporation.

We applaud the Women's Network of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce for giving more girls in this City the chance they deserve to reach their potential.

Match Highlight

Approximately 70 members of the United States Navy are stationed on the USS Constitution in the Charlestown Navy Yard. Four of them are not only taking the time to serve their country in the military, but are also serving their local community as Big Sisters. Below, you will read about First Class Petty Officer, Suzi Dangler, and Second Class Petty Officer, Laura Jo Doolittle. They have been volunteering as Big Sisters at the Harvard Kent Elementary School in Charlestown since last fall. "The Big Sisters are really involved with what the students are doing," said school nurse, Kathleen Vinciguerra, who works with the Big Sister social workers on-site to facilitate the program. "You can see when they are together that it's really working; they are really happy together."

BIG SISTER SUZI DANGLER & LITTLE SISTER COURTNEY

"Eeeeeeeeeeeeeee!!!" This is the word—actually more of an excited squeal delivered with a giant smile—Little Sister Courtney uses to describe how she feels about her Big Sister Suzi. Courtney is a petite (the self-proclaimed smallest in her class), energetic fifth grader who loves gym class, math, reading chapter books, and of course, her Big Sister. Courtney comes from a large family of step and half siblings as well as a biological sister. She said it can be hard sometimes to get attention at home with so many people around, but every Wednesday at school she has someone whose attention is solely on her: Big Sister Suzi Dangler.

Suzi also comes from a large blended family, and knows all about being a big sister; she was the oldest of eight growing up in Maryland. Despite her family experience, the real reason Suzi became a Big Sister was to have fun and to be a kid again, even if for only one hour a week. "I spend too much time around adults," said Suzi. "It's not fun. Coming here is like an escape for me." However, Suzi realizes that being a mentor isn't just about fun and games. "A mentor gives a child someone to interact with outside her regular routine, someone who can give her a different perspective." The fact that Suzi is a woman in the military helps to give her Little Sister a different perspective. "Courtney sees me as someone who doesn't fit the typical girly stereotype."

According to her teacher, Courtney has shown improvement in her academic performance, her attitude toward school, her classroom behavior, and her relationships with other adults, since being matched with her Big Sister. Suzi has supported Courtney's growth at school with a mix of learning and fun. During their visits, the two like to find a quiet corner to play Mad Libs together. Courtney is still wrapping her head around what constitutes an adjective, but she enjoys the word games with her Big Sister. "They're fun...and secretly educational," Suzi whispered. And when it comes to finding adjectives to describe how Suzi has made her life different, Courtney has no problem: "Happy and exciting."

Courtney and Suzi enjoy a game of Mad Libs together

Denise-Ann and Laura Jo spend time together on the playground

BIG SISTER LAURA JO DOOLITTLE & LITTLE SISTER DENISE-ANN

Little Sister Denise-Ann is a quiet, thoughtful third grader whose expressive face makes her appear wise beyond her years. Her older sister, who attends the Harvard Kent as well, was matched with a Big Sister in third grade and Denise-Ann wanted one too. Though she was looking forward to having a Big Sister, it took her time to open up to Laura Jo when they were first matched. "I used to be quiet when I was a kid too," said Laura Jo. "I would have liked to have had a Big Sister at her age."

Now that they have been meeting each week for nearly a year, Laura Jo said Denise-Ann has really come out of her shell. "She talks a lot more now," said Laura Jo. "She's really matured." Denise-Ann's teacher agrees, noting that she is better able to express her feelings since being matched with Laura Jo.

The two enjoy a variety of activities during their visits, from word games, tic tac toe, and Trouble, to arts and crafts and drawing. They also love spending time out on the playground where Denise-Ann is trying to break her personal record of crossing the monkey bars in less than six seconds. Laura Jo plays timekeeper and offers encouragement, while Denise-Ann aims for a new record of four seconds.

Laura Jo said that being in the Navy allows her to have many mentors of her own. "You always have someone to go to when you don't know what to do. You get a different perspective instead of just being one-minded." When she is with her Little Sister, Laura Jo helps to expose Denise-Ann to different perspectives as well. During one of Laura Jo's visits with her Little Sister, a boy told Denise-Ann she shouldn't have short hair like a boy. Laura Jo quickly pointed out that many boys have long hair and many girls have short hair, and that there's no right or wrong hairstyle for boys and girls. "It's so important for girls to have someone who lets them know that it doesn't matter; that there's no such thing as 'Oh you can't do that because you're a girl,'" said Laura Jo. With Laura Jo's words still ringing in her ears, Denise-Ann and her Big Sister headed out to the playground, where Denise-Ann crossed the monkey bars faster than anyone else.

Former BSA Director Continues Support

On October 4, former Big Sister Association of Greater Boston Executive Director, Gloria Oldsman, celebrated her 80th birthday. What did she ask for? She requested that friends and family donate to the organization that she led from 1968-1975. "I don't need anything material at my age," said Gloria. "I wanted to do something good." To date, her request has raised more than $450 for Big Sister.

Gloria began her career at Big Sister as a case worker, making and supporting Big and Little Sister matches. When she took the helm in 1968, at the height of the women's movement, we were serving 350 girls annually through our Community-Based Mentoring program. School-Based Mentoring and Group Mentoring did not yet exist. Today we serve 3,000 girls annually through all three programs as well as our new program, Neighborhood-Based Mentoring.

How does Gloria feel about Big Sister's significant growth in the past few decades? "My hope has always been that Big Sister remains a viable agency that serves girls in the way they need to be served," she said. We are proud to be carrying on that legacy by continuing to develop our programs to meet the unique needs of today's girls. Thank you to Gloria for her support and we wish you many more birthdays to come!

Where Are They Now?

FORMER LITTLE SISTER COLLEEN WHITE AND FORMER BIG SISTER KRISTEN HERLIHY

Former Little Sister Colleen White grew up in South Boston. She called Southie home, but her definition of home did not extend much beyond that. Colleen was often on the move. She lived down by the beach and in the D street housing development with her mom, her dad, or her grandmother. Despite having an older brother and, later, two younger sisters, Colleen said it never seemed like a real family because she always felt alone.

To combat her loneliness and frustration with her home life, Colleen would escape to the local community center everyday after school. "It kept me off the streets, which was good, because for all the good things in my neighborhood, there was a lot of negative too," she said. "I saw drug and alcohol abuse and constant fights, no matter where I went. It seemed like it would be really easy to slip into that world." But when Colleen's grandmother—with whom she had always been the closest—died, Colleen's world collapsed and she slipped into a period of depression. Colleen's mother didn't know how to help her daughter. She signed up Colleen for a Big Sister and according to Colleen, "It's probably the smartest thing she ever did."

Ten year old Colleen told our staff social worker responsible for finding her a Big Sister, that she wished for a pony, a Jeep that she could drive herself, and to be a millionaire. Her ideal Big Sister would like to do the same things that she liked to do: rollerblade, play games, eat junk food, and go to Castle Island. She would be pretty, and would be the perfect mix of serious and silly, quiet and talkative. Looking back, Colleen realized it was a tall order.

On January 16, 2001, Colleen met her new Big Sister, Kristen Herlihy of Cambridge. Aside from being Irish Catholic and sharing the red line on the T, Colleen did not think that she would have anything in common with this woman. "She definitely wasn't from Southie," said Colleen. She noticed that Kristen did not look or sound like the people she knew. When they left the house, Kristen was concerned with things like looking both ways before crossing the street. "That was not something anyone had ever taught me before," said Colleen.

Already slow to trust people, Colleen took her time warming up to Kristen. They tried new activities each week, visiting just about every museum Boston has to offer. "Truthfully they were kind of boring," admitted Colleen. "But the best part about Kristen is that she made it fun. She pointed out things I wouldn't have noticed on my own and she asked me what I thought about a photograph or a painting or a sculpture. She actually cared about what I had to say. I felt important for once." The two began to bond over other activities as well. Kristen took Colleen horseback riding, which she loved despite Kristen's insistence that she wear a bike helmet for extra protection. Kristen, who grew up in Winchester, said "I must have seemed like such a country girl compared to Colleen." However, one of Colleen's favorite pastimes was tending to a garden that she and her Big Sister planted at Kristen's house. "Colleen loved gardening," said Kristen. "She would always want to come over and take care of the garden. She really nurtured it and cared for it." Colleen also took up residence on Kristen's refrigerator. She claimed some real estate as "Colleen's side" and covered it with drawings and photos of the two of them. Kristen began to realize just how important they had become to each other.

As Colleen entered her teenage years, her interests started to shift to boys and cars. At 16, Colleen was desperate to learn how to drive. Neither of her parents would teach her, so Colleen informed Kristen that she would be the one to do it. Kristen was terrified, but agreed to let Colleen learn how to drive in her car. It wasn't the Jeep Colleen had hoped for, but it had four wheels and an engine, and Colleen was more than ready. However, Kristen made a deal with her Little Sister. For every driving lesson she gave Colleen, she would also give her a lesson in car maintenance. Colleen agreed to the stipulation and to this day she thanks her Big Sister for teaching her how to change her oil and check her tire pressure.

They had also made another deal as Colleen navigated her teens. Colleen's friends started to get pregnant and drop out of high school. Kristen worried that her Little Sister would do the same, especially when Colleen began talking about how cute the babies were. Kristen asked her Little Sister to promise her two things: 1. Colleen would not get pregnant before Kristen did, and 2. Colleen would graduate from high school.

Kristen assumed Colleen forgot their bargain, but she did not. Today Colleen is 20 years old. She graduated from high school and also joined the United States Army National Guard. Kristen was hesitant at first to support Colleen's decision to enter the military, but she was there by her side the day Colleen was sworn in, and she sent care packages to Colleen while she was at boot camp. In March of next year, Colleen will marry one of her fellow soldiers with Kristen will be there to celebrate. Colleen is still waiting to have her first child.

"At first I saw Kristen as someone who wasn't like me, who wasn't from Southie," said Colleen. "Today, I see my best friend. I see someone who I can trust and who has always been there for me. I see someone I admire and someone who cared enough to stick with me for the past nine years. I also see someone who helped me fulfill my wishes. That one pony ride, that first driving lesson, and of course everyday spent with her will always be a memory that I can tell my first child. Even though I never became a millionaire, having a Big Sister like Kristen felt like a million bucks to me." Colleen hopes she will soon have that kind of impact on a girl in waiting to be matched with her own Big Sister. She is currently in the process of becoming a Big Sister herself!

that encourage them, build their self-esteem and support them as they struggle with the myriad issues and choices that are part of adolescence.

Big Sister's programs are preventative. How do you view mentoring as a tool in crime and violence prevention?

Among many other things, mentors offer support and guidance. They open mentees up to positive experiences and often steer them toward making good choices. Young people want to feel good about themselves and the direction their lives are taking, but in the absence of encouragement from a caring adult, they can and will make very negative choices; ones that may involve or may lead to both crime and violence.

It has been said that girls are "collateral damage" in relation to gang violence in the City—they are often the girlfriends or family members of victims, but little more has been studied about their actual involvement. How do you see violence affecting girls in our area?

In war, "collateral damage" is a level of harm, not directly intended, but accepted as part of the battle or conflict. We should never view any type of harm to young girls or women, as acceptable, regardless of their connection to the actual perpetrators of the violence. Violence is a learned behavior and a public health issue and we should treat it as such. It causes substantial and sometimes irreparable harm to the physical and mental health of everyone it touches, but especially our young girls, who often respond to the trauma with self-destructive, anti-social and sometimes criminal behaviors.

You have the top job in a male-dominated field, and in fact, you are the first female Sheriff Suffolk County has ever had. What role did mentors play in helping you achieve this success?

My greatest mentor was my mother. She was a strong, smart, elegant woman who deeply valued education and saw nearly every interaction as an opportunity to teach me how to best negotiate the world. Through her, I learned to never give up, to have the courage of my convictions, and that my achievements could only be limited by me.

What would you tell girls who might want to follow in your footsteps by pursuing a career in a field not traditionally open to women?

I would tell them that a "man's job" is just one a woman has not yet done. Then I would tell them to be that woman.

The following Big and Little Sisters celebrated match anniversaries between October 1, 2009 and December 31, 2009. Congratulations to all on your lasting friendships!

Happy Anniversary!

Team Big Sister Rides for the Girls!

There was no stopping Team Big Sister at this year's Rodman Ride for Kids! On Saturday, September 26, thirty-four riders gathered at the starting line in Foxboro, to take on a 25, 50, or 100 mile route. This year's team was our largest to date and included the 34 riders plus 12 "virtual riders" (fundraising only) who helped us raise nearly $50,000!

The Rodman Ride for Kids is an umbrella matching gift charity raising funds for youth-focused social service agencies in Massachusetts. This year's Team Big Sister was made up of a diverse group of riders that included Board Members, Young Professional Board Members,

Big Sister volunteers, staff, and many others involved with the Big Sister community! Riders and friends joined us for several events in support of Team Big Sister leading up to the big day: a kick-off party, a fundraising social for young professionals, team spinning classes, and boot camp.

On Ride day, participants cycled a scenic route around southeastern Massachusetts and ended with a celebratory barbeque at the finish line. "I'm fortunate to have the experience of not only raising crucial funds for Big Sister as a rider, but also seeing the benefits of those funds through the amazing friendship I share with my Little Sister Toni," said Laura Toni Holsinger, who in addition to being a Team Big Sister rider and Big Sister to 13 year old Little Sister Toni, is also a staff member. "There are so many girls in Boston that could benefit from the care and attention of a Big Sister, and I'm proud to have ridden 25 miles in support of that!"

We would like to thank Team Big Sister sponsors, Shawmut Design & Construction and Gerry McCarthy of Mortgage Masters, Inc. We also want to thank our fantastic team captains, Andie Morales and Lisa Scannell, in addition to all those who rode, raised money, and the generous folks who donated to them. A special thank you goes to our top three fundraisers: Tim O'Brien, Janet Kraus, and Aileen Keaney, who raised a total of $8,960. We're already tuning our bikes up for next year's Ride and hope that you will join us!
